

THE UK'S LARGEST GRADUATE ART, DESIGN + FASHION SHOW
RETURNS TO THE OLD TRUMAN BREWERY
FOR ITS 13TH EDITION

Free Range 2013 will take over The Old Truman Brewery for its annual seven week showcase of emerging British-based art and design talent, bringing a vast network of young graduates to London's Brick Lane. Firmly established as the leading identifier and supporter of tomorrow's best creatives, 2013 is set to be the exhibition's biggest year yet. Over a hundred courses and more than 3000 students will take part in a series of free exhibitions across five disciplines: fashion and textiles; design; photography and media; contemporary and fine art; interior design & architecture. In order to house the ever-increasing student showcase this year, the exhibition has expanded to take up all three floors of the Old Truman Brewery's expansive F Block.

Under the guidance of creative director and founder Tamsin O'Hanlon, Free Range continues to develop year on year and has become a crucial part of London's cultural calendar. With more than 100,000 visitors attending the free exhibitions in 2012, the show attracts a wealth of participating UK universities and art colleges. In addition to providing exhibiting talent with a prominent platform for their work, Free Range collaborates with leading industry figures, opinion formers and institutes to facilitate introductions with new creative talent, providing a support network after the student's graduate.

New for 2013, Free Range is creating a dedicated networking space & cafe in the Loading Bay on Dray Walk. This will provide an informal meeting space for students, industry and media, with coffee, wi-fi and seating available.

Free Range will continue its ongoing portfolio website as a platform for displaying the work of participating and former exhibitors (www.freerange.org.uk). The exhibitions are free and open to the public but all catwalk shows are invitation only. The Free Range catwalk shows commence on 29th May and the public exhibition commences on 31st May.

F BLOCK B5

Colchester School of Art has a history dating back to 1885, the year the original Art School was founded. As well as being witness to the many great developments and upheavals of the 20th century, the School has adapted to the various changes that have place in art and design practice and provides students with facilities to meet their photographic capabilities.

As a small group of 7, Colchester School of Art's BA (Hons) Photography group all approach photography in different ways; image making through both conceptual and commercial approaches. Some work using alternative photographic methods as a means of production, whilst others use more traditional methods to engage in fine art and commercial practices. A diverse range of subject matter is investigated in each artists work, with theoretical engagement in the specific areas of interest.
