

Health and Social Theory Research Group, Department of Sociology, sponsored by Institute of Hazard, Risk and Resilience, Durham University

Social Interpretations and Reactions to Air Pollution

Workshop 2

29 May 2019

Room 105, 32 Old Elvet

- |               |   |
|---------------|---|
| 11:00 – 11:30 | Keming Yang (Associate Professor, Department of Sociology, Durham University): ‘Air pollution as a social problem: developing a multiple comparative case study’  |
| 11:30 – 12:00 | Nick J Fox (Professor of Sociology, Department of Social Sciences, University of Huddersfield): ‘Inside the air pollution assemblage: matter, health and environment’   |
| 12:00 – 12:30 | Emma Garnett (School of Population Health and Environmental Sciences, King’s College London): “‘Sensing bodies’”: doing data ethnography in air pollution science’  |
| 12:30 – 1:30  | Lunch break   |
| 1:30 – 1:50   | Jonathan Wistow (Assistant Professor, Department of Sociology, Durham University): ‘Cress-sectoral and multi-scalar approaches to understanding policy implementation in health and social care systems’  |
| 1:50 – 2:10   | Brian Castellani (Professor, Department of Sociology, Durham University): ‘What makes air pollution prevention sociological?’   |
| 2:10 – 2:30   | Fiona McDonald (Associate Professor, Co-Director of Australian Centre for Health Law Research, Queensland University of Technology, Australia): ‘Ethical considerations around recommending or distributing facemasks for community protection from ambient air pollution events’ |
| 2:30 – 2:50   | Laksmi Rachmawati (PhD candidate, Department of Earth Sciences, Durham University): ‘Community Risk Perception on Air Pollution: Findings from a Literature Review’   |
| 2:50 – 3:00   | Discussions and conclusions   |